

Remote Work and Hybrid Workplace Policy

How and where Zayans work — flexibility, expectations, and accountability

Policy Owner	People Operations
Policy Number	ZP-PEO-022
Effective Date	February 1, 2026
Last Reviewed	February 1, 2026
Applies To	All Zaya employees, with role-specific exceptions noted in Section 4

1. Our Philosophy

Zaya believes great work happens when great people are trusted to choose how and where they work best. We are a flexibility-first company: most roles can be performed remotely, hybrid, or in-office depending on the needs of the work and the preferences of the individual. This policy sets the expectations that make that flexibility sustainable — for the employee, for the team, and for the company.

2. Work Modes

Work Mode	Definition	Office Days / Week
Fully Remote	Works from a designated home location; visits an office only for company events	0
Hybrid	Works from home most days but anchored to a Zaya office or co-working hub for collaboration	2-3
Office-Based	Works primarily from a Zaya office; remote days available with manager approval	4-5
Travel-Heavy	Spends 40%+ of time at customer sites or other Zaya locations	Varies

Each role at Zaya is designated by the hiring manager and People Operations as Remote-Eligible, Hybrid-Required, or Office-Required at the time of job posting. Employees may request a change in work mode through their manager and the People Operations Business Partner; approvals depend on the needs of the role and team.

3. Core Hours and Time Zones

Zaya operates across more than thirty time zones. To make global collaboration practical, every team establishes a four-hour core overlap window during which team members are expected to be available for real-time collaboration. Outside of core hours, employees are encouraged to flex their schedules around personal responsibilities, energy peaks, and family commitments. Meetings should be scheduled within core hours whenever possible; meetings that fall outside core hours should be recorded.

4. Role-Specific Requirements

- Lab and hardware engineering: requires on-site presence at least three days per week at the Austin or Dublin labs.
- Customer success and field sales: classified as Travel-Heavy; expected to be on-site with customers at least 30% of working days per quarter.
- Manufacturing and supply chain operations: Office-Required at the relevant facility.
- Executive leadership (VP+): expected at the New York or San Francisco hub at minimum eight days per quarter, with all-hands attendance required in person.
- All other roles: default to Remote-Eligible unless designated otherwise during hiring.

5. Home Workspace Standards

Employees working remotely are responsible for maintaining a workspace that is safe, ergonomic, reasonably quiet, and equipped with reliable broadband. Zaya provides a one-time $1,500 home office stipend (see the Expense Reimbursement Policy, ZP-FIN-014) and a $90 monthly connectivity stipend to support these standards. Employees handling sensitive customer data must work in a location where their screen cannot be observed by unauthorized persons and must use the Zaya VPN for all corporate applications.

6. Working from Outside Your Home Country

Zayans may work from a country other than their home country for up to 30 calendar days per rolling 12-month period without prior approval, provided the country is not on the restricted-locations list maintained by Legal. Stays beyond 30 days, or work from any restricted location, require advance approval through the Global Mobility Portal because of tax, immigration, and data-residency implications. Employees are responsible for ensuring they have appropriate work authorization in any country where they perform work for Zaya.

7. Collaboration Expectations

- Default to asynchronous communication for status updates, decisions, and documentation. Use Teams chat for short questions; use long-form documents for anything that requires alignment.
- Cameras on for meetings with eight or fewer participants and for any meeting that includes customers, unless there is a specific reason otherwise.
- Respect time zones when scheduling; rotate inconvenient meeting times rather than always penalizing the same regions.
- Record and document decisions in the appropriate team channel — silence is not consent.
- In-person time matters. Teams should plan at least one in-person gathering per quarter, even if entirely remote.

8. Performance and Accountability

Flexibility is earned and renewed through performance, not granted as an entitlement. Managers are expected to evaluate employees on outcomes and the quality of their collaboration — never on where they sit or how visible they are on chat. If an employee's performance falls below expectations, the manager may, with People Operations support, temporarily adjust the employee's work mode (for example, requiring more in-office days) as part of a documented performance improvement plan.

9. Health, Safety, and Wellbeing

Remote work blurs the boundary between work and life. Zaya expects every employee to take their full vacation entitlement, to disconnect outside of working hours, and to use the Headspace and Lyra benefits available to them. Managers are responsible for modeling these behaviors — taking real vacation, not pinging the team after hours, and respecting weekends. Any work-related injury that occurs while working remotely should be reported to People Operations the same as an injury at a Zaya office.

10. Reviewing and Updating This Policy

This policy is reviewed at least annually by People Operations and the Executive Team. Major changes are communicated through the company all-hands and a written update in the People Hub. Questions, scenarios, and suggestions are welcome at peopleops@zaya.com.

This policy supersedes ZP-PEO-022 v2.1 (September 2024). It is intended as a global baseline; country-specific addenda apply where local law requires.
